Intaglio (Etchings) - a method of printing in which ink is forced into incised lines on a plate, the surface wiped clean, dampened paper placed on top, and the paper and plate go through an etching press to transfer the ink to the paper.

Chine collé - a method of adhering thin pieces of colored paper to the larger printing paper at the same time that the inked image is printed.

Aquatint - an intaglio method in which tones are obtained by powdered rosin or paint spray. Acid bites these tones into the plate to various depths, deeper bites yielding darker tones.

Monoprints - a print is pulled from a plate that already has an image incised into it. Lisa Pettit's monoprints are created by inking an etched plate and painting directly on the plate before printing on the press.
